

Shapa announces the winners of the Solids Handling Industry Awards for 2015

The SHAPA Industry Awards, in association with S&BH Magazine have been expanded to five categories for this year including Innovation, Export, Company excellence, Individual endeavour and Customer of the Year.

Company of the Year went to Dustcheck, they combined increased sales with higher staffing levels, improved manufacturing facilities and enhanced environmental awareness.

Innovation Award went to Russell Finex for their screen change lifting device. This ingenious invention to separate screens for ease of removal and maintenance, which can also be retro-fitted, will reduce downtime in many applications

Exporter of the Year Award also went to Russell Finex for improved growth in a challenging marketplace.

Individual Award went to John Pethullis of Clyde Bergmann chiefly for his management for Shepherd Group of their extensive contract to install biomass handling facilities at Drax Power Station.

SHAPA Customer of the Year, again awarded for the first time this year, went to Drax Power Station for their forethought, cooperation and sheer determination throughout a lengthy but highly successful process.

The Association applaud all our winners and indeed all contenders who exhibited exemplary standards. For more information about SHAPA or to tap into a wealth of knowledge and experience, please visit www.shapa.co.uk or email info@shapa.co.uk.
