

RotaVal have received USDA Certification

There are a strict set of rules to comply with when manufacturing equipment to be used with dairy products in the United States of America. The US Department of Agriculture provides leadership on food, agriculture, nutrition and other related issues. They recognise that a range of RotaVal's valves meet the stringent guidelines to be used within these sectors. In order to be awarded with this accreditation, a valve and all components were assessed to the highest levels to ensure it was compliant with the regulations.

Any errors that were picked up had to be rectified, and it also had to be FDA approved. Once this assessment had taken place, we gained the acceptance.